

3-TabShingles

These are the most common type of shingles on the market. They have a very flat appearance and are what most people picture when they think of the word "shingle". They are available in two basic categories: 20 year & 25 year, with the 25 year shingle being available with Fungus Resistance to keep the black streaks off of the shingles.

20Year:

A good basic choice if function is the primary goal.

25 Year / Fungus Resident:

Identical in appearance, this shingle is made with a higher tear and pull resistance. Also, it is the most inexpensive shingle available with Fungus Resistance.

Architectural Shingles

If appearance is an influential factor in addition to function, these value-added shingles have a number of different looks and color blends giving the roof a "layered" look. These laminated shingles weigh more and are stronger than economy shingles and, as a result, offer a greater degree of wind, tear and blow-off resistance in addition to greater value and longer warranties. Most are available with fungus

30 Year / Fungus Resident:

Landmark30, Timberline30

40 Year / Fungus Resident:

Landmark40, Timberline40

50 Year / Fungus Resident:

Timberline Ultra, Landmark XL

Designer Shingles

These are the "flagship" shingles of their respective manufacturers. Each are unique in appearance and designed to give a specific look while out performing other standard shingles. Most are available with fungus resistance.

40 Year / Fungus Resident:

Hatteras, Slate Line

50 Year / Fungus Resident:

Independence

Lifetime

Carriage House, Grand Manor, Country Mansion, Grand Sequoia

